Just be who you are

David fell in love with Amy the first day he saw her. Amy was so adorable that David was instantly attracted. He didn't want to lose the chance, so he took the action, asking Amy out on a date.

To his delight, Amy accepted his invitation to go to the cinema on Saturday. Amy was a bit shy because it was her first time hanging out with a boy, but she couldn't resist the opportunity.

On Saturday morning, Amy got up early and went to the boutique to buy some new clothes for her date with David. She even went to the hair salon for a new haircut! She wanted to make a good impression on David and put in a lot of effort. As she got ready, she couldn't help but wonder if David would like her new outfit. Thoughts like "Will he hold my hand?" and "Will he think I'm gorgeous today?" flooded her mind. It was a big contrast from her usual attire, which consisted of old-fashioned tops and jeans, and even a pair of high heels. Actually, Amy had no sense of fashion and only dressed up in hopes of impressing David. After saying goodbye to her mother, she met up with David.

That evening, when David saw Amy's new outfit, he was surprised and a bit taken aback. This made Amy feel sad. All she wanted was to impress David and make him like her more. But it seemed like her efforts were in vain.

As Amy's tears were about to fall, David took her hand and said, "I know you dressed up to impress me, but you don't have to. I like you for who you are, not for your clothes or appearance. Just be yourself, you don't have to change to please anyone. And let me tell you, you're the best just the way you are." This brought tears of happiness to Amy's eyes and she was grateful to have met someone who would treasure her for being herself.
